"Unlock Your Super Powers
And Get Results Lightning Fast!"

It is amazing when you think about how differently men and women communicate. What's even more amazing is the number of men who are still unaware of these differences.

When you really understand the secret to communicating with women, a whole new world opens up because their basically speaking "another language".

And in terms of being perceived as desirable, you can achieve this a lot faster when you know these secrets.

You're not going to attempt to decipher their yapping and gossiping.

However, you're going to use this tool to become a more seductive individual.

When you have this skill, it doesn't stop there!

You can use your powers to charm the headphones of the McDonald's drive-thru girl and get free burgers! (it's possible)

Ok...let's get serious...

Let's zoom in on all of the aspects that are important to you at this time - the sexual part of your relationship and how Levels of Communication will help you.

A guy that is in tune with how a woman thinks will have obvious advantages.

Please, do yourself a favor and read that statement one more time.

My goal is to provide you with enough information within this micro report that will make you an instant master at this skill.

Now, I must mention that it is not my intention to write about dating and how to pick up women, however, much of the solutions intended to correct the mistakes in one's sexual relationship can be solved by analyzing aspects of the dating process.

Levels of Communication

In many dating books you will often find some sort of body language section. This is the cool stuff right?

All you have to do is interact with the target-female, carefully watch her body movements and you can instantly tell if she is into you. It's like being a mind reader!

It's great, right?

Here's the problem...

The body language that reveals the emotion or basic thought process fails to reveal the more important pre-emotion that initiated that body signal.

(Huh?)

Here's what I mean...

If a woman is nervous around you, you don't need to be told this, right?

Body language books are designed to tell you if she is nervous (or other surface level responses).

You never learn anything significant that is outside of your natural human observations.

For example:

You need to know what that nervousness means.

She could have had a tremendous crush on you where she is pleasuring herself to you every night. And the idea of being face-to-face with you sends a surge through every nerve in her body!

On the other hand, her nervousness could mean she finds you creepier than tabloid-celebrity Bat Boy passing out lollipops at the local playground....

How the hell would you know?

And I don't mean 'how would you know if FBI really captured Bat Boy, I mean 'how would you know what the nervousness meant?

Again: Is she nervous because she likes you OR Is she nervous because she doesn't like you.

Here's another problem: Body language is very specific to the individual. So in order for it to have any real value to you, you would need to know her experiences - her personality - her current mood - her current beliefs - and so on.

Most of the effectiveness of using body language is actually having it on your mind that you will observe body movements as you communicate with the person anyway

Meaning, just being aware that you will pay attention to physical signals.

Other than that, I've never been a fan of body language. Although, I do appreciate the fantasy behind it.

The idea of mind-reading.

As far as I'm concerned, if you really want to be effective with women, you need to get good at just 2 things:

- 1) Knowing about human/female behavior
- 2) Knowing specific information about her

As far as the first part, you don't have to read 300 books on human behavior.

Just write a list of basic things you know about human (females)

- Women like to be entertained.
- Women are nosy (I mean "curious") LOL
- Women want to feel good.
- Women are good natured*

[Feel free to continue this list. All you have to do is write down the most basic thing that you can think of]

(*90% of women are good-natured)

Recognizing the level that she is communicating allows you to instantly determine what she is trying to say – after practicing this for awhile - of course.

The good news is this skill can be mastered in one day.

You will see results and you will be able to:

1. understand the various levels of communications (The CR James Method of doing this)
2. and actively speak on her desired level by mimicking the female's communication structure – we'll get to that in a second. This is fun & powerful.

Remember, communication is two-sided. Therefore, enhancing it means you must strengthen both sides.

It's kind of like what you would do if you wanted to strengthen your arms. You would work your biceps (pull movements) and your triceps (push movements).

With communication you want to develop the strength in which you receive (pull in) information, as well as the strength in which you deliver (push out) information.

In some cases your woman may not even be aware that she is sending a deeper more accurate meaning within her statements.

In other cases she'll intentionally speak in a way where her words will actually insinuate what she is actually trying to communicate.

Either way, if you are not picking up on what's really being said, then you are going to be missing out.

In the dating environment, the guy that scores with the most babes is the one who understands and reads all of her little messages. When a woman runs into a guy that is in tune with her, she has no choice but to be magnetized and drawn towards him.

Think about that for a second.

Think about the concept of sex on a very basic level: It's a pairing of like bodies.

Some would even say it's a pairing of like souls.

When females are in the presence of a guy who is "in tuned" with them, they melt and lose control.

Correction:

When females are in the presence of a guy who THEY BELIEVE is "in tuned" with them, they melt and lose control.

Unfortunately, women, including the one you are involved with, hardly ever experience connections like this.

These are rare moments.

Some women have to force themselves into lesbianism to get this kind of understanding out of a person. These type of lesbians (or misunderstood & confused straight woman) will often jump back and forth between male and female partnerships.

The bottom line is women beg and crave for us to communicate with them on their level.

The three reasons why being in-tuned to her is magically effective:

1. People tend to trust those that are similar to them more.
2. People are magnetized to those that are similar.

3. Women (in particular) rarely experience guys like this. Therefore, you conveniently stand out.

Listen.

You ever hear a guy complain about how complicated women are - meanwhile the writing has been on the wall the whole time.

What's even worse is when guys get together and talk about how their wives all do the same exact crazy things that they all can't seem to figure out.

Well if these women are all behaving in a similar fashion, shouldn't that tell you something!

"Women love to shop."

"Women love to gossip and yap."

"Women always nag about the sports on TV."

"Women don't try to solve relationship problems, they just talk about their feelings."

"Women don't like surprises during oral."

"Women this."

"Women that."

"Women always read too far into my comments."

((pause))

Let's freeze right here for a second. Let's analyze that last statement.

I remember one day telling the lovely lady in my life that she looked nice one particular day.

Instead of thanking me for the compliment she says: "So I normally don't look nice?"

Do you see what's happening?

This is the beauty of the whole thing. Most (and I really mean "all") women attach a "what did he really mean by that" or a "what's he trying to say" statement in their heads to everything a man says.

Let's talk a look at some examples.

You: I've never seen that dress before. (with her wearing it)

Her: Do you think it makes me look fat?

All you were doing was commenting on the dress. Sometimes it's even worse.

You: I've never seen that dress before.

Her: So have you always thought I was fat!

It doesn't stop there. That's not the extreme by any stretch...

You: I never seen that dress before.

Her: I'm taking the kids and moving back in with my mother!!!

“Huh?”

Has your girlfriend or wife ever responded to something you've said that was so off the mark, that it just left you shaking your head?

My lovely lady has!

In fact, I often mumble “where the hell did that come from?” in my sleep!

Basically, it is in their nature to communicate how they do.

All I'm saying is that instead of complaining about how they communicate, let's take a step back for a minute and relax. Let's think about how we can use that to our advantage - instead of having it work against us... because 'how they communicate' is not going to change.

Throughout this report, we will refer to her communications as on the secondary level and our communication as on the first level. (Refer to the Levels of Communication Chart - FIGURE 1)

Guys tend to say exactly what they mean.

Women are more passive and will often insinuate their real message (and sometimes without being aware of it).

Basically, if she attaches a “what does he mean by that” to everything you say, then by doing the same thing you would be able to decode valuable information within her statements.

Let's remember that they always want to know:

“Why?”

“Why is he saying that?”

“Why is he asking me that?”

“Why this?”

“Why that?”

In most cases they will answer the question themselves (either being right or wrong) and then respond to the answer of the question they created as if it was "information you provided".

Let's look at the example I used earlier:

© Copyright. All Rights Reserved.

<http://SuperSeductionPower.com>

You: I've never seen that dress before. (with her wearing it)

Your true meaning: You never seen that dress before. You were just making an observation.

In her head: "What did he mean by that? Is he trying to tell me something? He is trying to tell me something. What is he trying to tell me? Is he trying to bring attention to my body? He is trying to bring attention to my body. Does that mean I need to lose weight?" [in nanoseconds]

Her: Do you think it (the dress) makes me look fat?

This is a classic question that women ask. I always liked Al Bundy's answer to this question: "It's not the dress that makes you look fat, it's the fat that makes you look fat."

Obviously, you can't say this to her nor would you want to, but the bottom line is that the question or statement (based on her assumption) that she says to you, especially if it appears to come out of nowhere, is based on a series of questions and answers that took place in her head.

So when a woman says to you out loud "what do you mean by that" or any question that appeared to come from nowhere, it means she couldn't answer that particular question she created in her mind.

If she would have answered the question ("Do you think it (the dress) makes me look fat?") in her head, then her comment to you would be based on this answer.

It would be something like: So have you always thought I was fat!

These are the differences in how men and women communicate - nothing more, nothing less. This has nothing to do with how intelligent they are.

TRUE STORY: I sat down with my lovely girlfriend one day and I wanted her opinion (because she is intelligent) about these differences. I was sure she would agree. She was so eager to listen as I explained the different levels in which we communicate and how women somehow attach a "why this" and "why that" to what a guy says...

Her: Are you trying to say that women are stupid?

Let's move on.

But wait there's more...

HERE'S ANOTHER STORY: It was a Sunday afternoon and I was stretched out on the sofa watching TV. She briefly walks by and asks if I was enjoying the game.

Me: Hell yeah, the Ravens are up 17 in the fourth quarter.

Her: Oh

Later on that day, I start kissing on her trying to make things happen.

Her: Earlier, you didn't want to do anything.

Me: Huh?

As the conversation went on, it was brought to my attention that her asking me how the game was going was an attempt to initiate sex!

What the $%@# !!

Note: She wasn't wearing anything seductive and she wasn't looking or talking sexy.

By understanding her nature, I could have played her 'communication game' and said well what does she mean by that when she asked about the game...

And depending on my interest level and playoff implications, I could have made an informed decision!

This is one of many examples that illustrate how your lack of being in tune with her will result in missed sexual opportunities.

In fact, any good book that teaches women how to be more effective with guys will actually teach women to understand that a guy can't read your mind.

To demonstrate this in real-time (as I write this), I will hop online and chat with one of my intelligent female friends about this issue. (assuming that someone is on)

I'm logging on now.

Ok.....

Looking around....

There is one....

Bingo!

(Note: This is a cut and paste of a real conversation)

cr: How are you?
[a random online female friend]: i'm good
[a random online female friend]: how about you cr: Incredible!!!!
[a random online female friend]: lol
[a random online female friend]: oh reallyl
cr: lol
[a random online female friend]: how is that cr: without a doubt cr: i just love life...
[a random online female friend]: rrrigght
[a random online female friend]: on those drugs again are you
[a random online female friend]: :)
cr: yes miss yoda
[a random online female friend]: :(

cr: no drugs here..

<< Here's my impersonation of a guy that has no idea what transitional phrases are> cr: why do females...

cr: communicate on a different level than guys...

[a random online female friend]: you mean...guys nod and grunt

cr: LOL

[a random online female friend]: girls use nouns, pronouns and adjectives cr: grumble grumble ...

[a random online female friend]: LOL

cr: actually it appears (based on my super human perception) that women ask and answer ...

[a random online female friend]: <---superhuman cr: (regardless of if they're right) questions in their mind...

cr: you just want to be like me cr: basically - guys are more direct

[a random online female friend]: lol...'tis the truth cr: but why? << why are guys more direct than females?>>

[a random online female friend]: because girls need details

<<HUH ?!! >>

<< Did you see how that makes no $#%@% sense? How does that answer the question? I didn't expect to illustrate my point - THIS FAST! >>

<< Let's continue >>

[a random online female friend]: it makes things more interesting cr: you are part of my experiment..LOL cr: aren't you majoring in psychology?

[a random online female friend]: no...but i know too too much about it cr: or marketing?

[a random online female friend]: advertising

[a random online female friend]: may be changing to english cr: but you read alot of psychology books, right?

cr: how ironic !

[a random online female friend]: why ironic?

cr: because often times guys speak...

cr: DIRECTLY or communicate directly an idea ...

cr: to a female..and she misses the message ..

[a random online female friend]: yeah...

cr: lol

cr: forget it

cr: too early in the morning for you

<http://SuperSeductionPower.com>

[a random online female friend]: i assume your trying to tell me something
[a random online female friend]: im just not getting it [a random online female friend]: sorry
cr: how ironic?
[a random online female friend]:
cr: ok i'll try again
cr: keep in mind ...you are only being asked this becuae i think (regardless of how misinformed i am) you are intelligent ..to a degree cr: ok
cr: for example...
[a random online female friend]: ok
cr: are you with me so far?
[a random online female friend]: yup cr: cool
cr: say we were married...
cr: and you put on a dress cr: and i made an observation: "i never seen that dress before" cr: what would you think?
[a random online female friend]: if i had worn it a lot before...i would think your an ass...
cr: why would i be an ass?
[a random online female friend]: if it was the first time i had worn it...i would say its new
[a random online female friend]: do you like it?
cr: in this situation
[a random online female friend]: because, your not very observant cr: i see cr: so if a person fails to observe, then he is an ass

<< She is obviously interpreting things on the Third Level – we'll get to that in a second >>

[a random online female friend]: lol
[a random online female friend]: yes...
cr: LOL
[a random online female friend]: i mean...thats part of life...just observing whats going on around you
[a random online female friend]: and...it makes a girl feel shitty if it seems like you are not willing to observe her

<< remember that >> cr: but don't women (at least the smart ones) know that guys don't care about that crap

cr: speaking of shitty
[a random online female friend]: yes...we know...
[a random online female friend]: we just feel like you care and appreciate us more...if you make an extra effort to do so
[a random online female friend]: are you writing this in your book?
cr: do you think i should?
[a random online female friend]: no...
cr: are you trying to call me fat
[a random online female friend]: i'll sue you
[a random online female friend]: LOL
cr: LOL!
cr: actually i might include it and take my chances with the lawsuit
[a random online female friend]: god damn people and their taking stuff from me
[a random online female friend]: :)
cr: are you flirting with me?
[a random online female friend]: mmm...

-- cut --

I'm back. If you noticed I placed in red the moment of "HUH?"

When I asked her why are guys more direct (than females), you'll notice that she was momentarily possessed by the demon of irony (who happens to resemble Bat Boy...)

Her response: "because girls need details..."

Oh yeah, if I get sued, I'll let you know.

But for now, I want to try to analyze what went on in her head. Let's back up one more time.

ME: but why? (...are guys more direct in their communication than women?)

IN HER HEAD: Why is he asking me this? He must care about what I think. Does he want to know what I think about what women want? I think he does. I'll tell him.

HER (out loud): because girls need details...

In reality, I'm not sure what went on in her head.

I also have another theory, it goes like this:

ME: but why? (...are guys more direct in their communication than women?)

IN HER HEAD: Why is he asking me this? He must care about what I think. I want to carry his child. He is so in tuned with me. Just talking to him makes me horny. A girl like me needs to know more about this amazing guy.

HER (out loud): because girls need details... Ok let's get serious for a minute.

I think the more complicated and intelligent the female is, the more complicated it is to predict/decipher the "in her head" sequence.

If you can't figure it out exactly, don't panic - just try to think about why she would make the "from left field" statement. That's normally very easy to pick up on and it will provide you with a wealth of information.

In other words, much like her thinking, you would say to yourself: "What does she mean by that?"

That should be enough.

Also, as the conversation went on (the uncut portion) with my online female friend, I discovered something magical that should lead into a technique that some guys may find very useful. And it happened by accident. Cool.

I already got the name for it and everything, but since it really doesn't have anything to do with levels of communication, it would be inappropriate to mention it here. Let's move on.

AN EFFECTIVE SEDUCTION TIP: If you convince a woman that you know her better than she knows herself, you will be able to do some "amazing things".

Becoming a master at deciphering her messages and sending powerful & indirect sexual tension building messages works toward the ideal case of you knowing her more than she knows herself.

Think about the trust you would have in someone that you felt knew you better than you knew yourself.

Communicating on her level sends the message that you really know her, because the average guy will only hear 14% of what she is saying.

When you understand her "left-field" style of communicating you'll automatically APPEAR to understand her better - because her only frame of reference is with "other guys" (....who don't understand this about her)

On the flip side (and quite naturally), women in general do not respond sexually or feel chemistry for guy who don't get it.

Always Remember This: Once a woman THINKS that a guy is weird, she considers him creepy - by default! The interesting thing is all it takes for a guy to be considered weird is for her to believe that he doesn't understand her... Think about that for a second. It's incredibly. Here's a better way of putting it (just in case that wasn't crystal clear to you)

Desirable Level	The Type of Guy	What She'll Say About Him
1	"The Creepy Guy"	"He's weird!"
5	"The Average Guy"	(nothing)
10	"The Guy Who Understands Her"	"It's amazing! I feel like he really understand me."

Imagine asking (by words or actions) your willing & horny girlfriend if she wouldn't mind having fun in the sack and she kept saying "huh?" as if she didn't know what you were talking about.

Every time you ask, she says "huh?"

Wouldn't that be frustrating?

Well, that's what women go through all the time.

In my football example, I could have acknowledged her desires.

Me: I see my little sweetie pie wants some action; I'll have to get back to you later.

(Independent results may vary)

Remember in the very beginning of this report I highlighted that my goal was to make you an instant master at developing your levels of communication.

This is an ongoing exercise. You want to study and analyze her statements. In your head you want to always ask "what does she mean by that?"

Anytime you ask yourself a question, you give permission to your higher mind to seek out the answer.

Review the chart (FIGURE 1) to see how deep these levels can be. It is important to know that women will often communicate on the first level just as guys.

The important thing to know is when they are communicating on the secondary level. All women are different, but once you get a full grasp of these levels you will observe when she is likely to speak on various levels.

In most cases, I find that as the potential for passiveness increases the depth of the level in which she will communicate increases (meaning she will become more vague and more difficult to decipher).

Seductive Communication

The objective is to send your real message on the secondary level.

Try to determine when she is likely to communicate on a certain level and then match it at those times.

Huge Tip: Remember, they communicate on this secondary level most of the time, so logically they will receive messages better this way. Also, they irrationally expect for guys to communicate like this.

For example, if your goal is to generate sexual desire in her, then the right messages that you want to send are those that make you appear more sexually appealing.

Basically, you are trying to communicate the right messages to her. And what you actually say to her will be the vehicle that sends the right messages.

And not know this is the primary reason why guys struggle with women!

Here's what I mean...

Most guys are not aware of the anti-seductive signals that they send during their communication with women. So not only do they NOT KNOW the list of anti-seductive signals, they don't know how to avoid sending them (on the second level).

This is huge!

Here is what I'm talking about so that you really get this.

I'll describe the very basic boy meets girl scenario that illustrates what guys often do wrong.

Boy sees girl.

Boy wants girl because girl is pretty.

Boy talks to girl and constantly tells her how pretty she is.

Girl is flattered

Boy lets girl know he wants her.

Boy doesn't get girl.

Meeting a woman for the first time (and getting her to find you desirable) often parallels the structure of what a guy needs to do in his relationship - to trigger her sexual thirst!

Let's take a brief look at what the boy did wrong.

First of all, 'boy' got caught up in his emotions and he didn't understand the real process - much like most guys.

When the boy saw the girl and decided that he wanted the girl, he should have found out (since he didn't) the things that a woman look for in a man, the things that make women drawn to men.

Then work on sending those messages - not directly - but on a level that her brain "grabs information" the most powerfully...

There's a huge difference.

Let's review the process again with a little commentary.

Boy sees girl. (Ok, not bad so far.)

Boy wants girl because girl is pretty. (Don't we all want pretty girls?)

Boy talks to girl and constantly tells her how pretty she is. (WRONG RESPONSE - by directly communicating that she is pretty over and over like guys typically do, Boy successfully communicates that he thinks she is pretty, but this does absolutely nothing for him. In fact he ends up indirectly sending the message that he is desperate.)

Girl is flattered. (Of course she is, but this generates zero sexual attraction to him)

Boy lets girl know he wants her. (This is huge mistake that many guys make. They think communicating an interest in her is somehow the same as doing the things that build desire. It's actually a selfish and childish way of thinking. The majority of guys take this approach. It is supremely underdeveloped. When my 3 year old son is begging for candy, I tell him no. He will then tell me "but I want the candy, it's yummy". When you express to a female that you really want her without taking any effort to make sure you are sending message that you are desirable, you are acting like a crying selfish three year old!)

Boy doesn't get girl. (He didn't do anything whatsoever that sent her message that he is desirable. So of course he didn't get her. From HER PERSPECTIVE, there is no shortage of guys who think she is pretty on this planet.)

The most powerful messages are ones that build desirable.

The most powerful messages are ones that communicate to her that you are desirable.

The most powerful way to send 'those messages' are indirectly (on the 2nd level)....

Let's talk about the second level..

When communicating with a female, the direct messages really have no value unless you effectively use them as a means of sending the more important indirect messages.

The guys who are able to 'covertly' get women horny (without them realizing how it happened) are the guys who are the masters at communicating with women in this way.

And he may not even realize he has this skill. For an example, a guy with a couple of sisters will tend to be REEEEAAALLLY good with women ... or REEEEAAAALLLY bad..

(I'll explain this at another time.)

Let's give a really cool example so that you'll really get this.

For instance, if we lived in a wacky world where the women got uncontrollably horny by guys that were good in geography (yet all the same communication rules applied) you wouldn't walk up her and say: "hey I'm good in geography" and expect to be successful in winning her over.

Instead you would walk up to her with two maps in your hand, flashing your compass watch and strike up a conversation about something totally unrelated.

It's been my experience that the difference between a guy that gets it and a guy that doesn't is often the way he communicates with women.

In other words, most guys already know that women want a man who is confident, ambitious, etc. They know the qualities.

That's not the problem.

They just don't know how to communicate those qualities the right way.

Often you will hear a guy say to a woman: "I'm confident" or "I'm nice".

They just flat out say it directly during their conversation not even realizing that they are also sending anti-seductive messages along with it. This is what she actually hears:

"What's your name.....I'm weird and creepy"

"Howdy.....I don't know how to communicate with you"

"Hey look at me..... I'm a desperate guy"

"How's it going young lady.....I'm pathetic"

"Blah blah blah..... I can't keep the meatballs in my sub." (looking at the sauce-stain on your shirt)

Everything you say and do will fire off signals.

You can master this concept alone and see tremendous success with your girlfriend or wife without even reading any further!

The indirect messages reveal everything.

The most intelligent men on this planet are still oblivious to this concept.

Remember when Bill Clinton was first accused of having sexual involvement with Monica Lewinsky and he said "I did not have sexual relations with that woman."

Most people (the media) had no idea that he actually told on himself. By saying "that woman" he indirectly sent the message that he thinks it is important to highlight the fact that she is a woman (not a "girl") - being that she was very young.

Now if you put her being of legal age aside, he without a doubt viewed her as a girl (being too young).

By stressing "that woman" he revealed via secondary communication that he had struggled internally with the age issue - he was removing or neutralizing guilt internally and it leaked out externally ("that woman").

It's one thing to be called a cheater, but it's another thing to be labeled as a man that fondles around with young (underage) girls.

It didn't matter that she was technically legal. In his mind, he perceived her as a child. To highlight that she was a woman, means that something went down. (pun intended)

When attempting to help guys understand women, I tell him the truth can be found in the indirect messages!

By the way, we all communicate indirectly at times. In fact, many criminals will "get busted" and "caught in lies" because they are clueless to this concept.

It's like the 3 year old who tells you he didn't eat the cookies - while having crumbs around his mouth.

Let's take a look at the chart (below).

Let's take a look at the chart (FIGURE 1) below which illustrates the various levels.

Communication Level	Interpretation	Example
First Level [men]	No deciphering is needed. The person means exactly what he says.	"Can I borrow some money?" Meaning: Can I borrow some money?
Second Level [women]	It takes one interpretation-step to decipher the person's real message.	"My rent is due, and I can't find anyone to borrow money from." Meaning: Can I borrow some money?
Third Level [women]	It takes 2 - 5 interpretation-steps to decipher the person's real message.	"I can't believe my rent is due already." Meaning: Can I borrow some money?
Fourth Level	It takes more than 5 interpretation-steps to decipher the person's real message.	"How much is your rent?" Meaning: Can I borrow some money?
Fifth Level	It takes a psychic to extract the real message from the delivered message.	"Hi Bob!" Meaning: Can I borrow some money?

Warmly,
CR James
